DOES COLLEGE EDUCATION PAY?

LESSON VII, THIRD QUARTER, INTER-NATIONAL SERIES, AUG. 17.

Text of the Lesson, Num, x, 11-13 and 29-36-Memory Verses, 33, 34-Golden Text. Ps. xxxi, 3-Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Copyright, 1902, by American Press Asso-

11-13. And they first took their journey according to the commandment of the Lord by the hand of Moses.

In the third month of the first year they came to Sinai, and on the first day of the first month of the second year the tabernacle was erected and accepted by God and filled with His glory (Ex. xix, 1; xl, 17, 34). Now, just fifty days later the cloud lifted, and they journeyed from Sinai to the wilderness of Paran in the order described in this chapter. Whether it was the tabernacle and its erection or the priesthood and the sacrifices or the journeying through the wilderness nothing was done and no step was taken except as God commanded or guided by the pillar of cloud and fire. On the part of Moses and Israel it was simply a matter of obedience. Concerning the cloud and its guidings and their obedience, see carefully chapter ix, 15-23.

29. Come thou with us and we will do thee good, for the Lord hath spoken good concerning Israel.

Thus said Moses to Hobab, the son of Raguel, or Rauel, or Jethro, the father of Zipporah, Moses' wife (Ex. ii, 18; iii, 1). The Lord had truly spoken good concerning Israel, as in Ex. vi, 6-8, that wondrous sevenfold "I will," beginning and ending with "I, Jehovah." Moses believed the word of the Lord, and, having respect unto the recompense of the reward, he forsook all his prospects in Egypt and fully identified himself with Israel as their leader under God (Heb. xi, 24-27).

30. And he said unto him, I will not go, but I will depart to mine own land and to

This was what Naomi afterward desired Ruth and Orpah to do, for she did not say to them, Come with me and I will do you good. Hobab saw no such prospect as opened up to the mind of Moses, and as far as appearances went he felt that he would be better off with his own people. It is difficult to many believers to esteem the reproach of Christ greater riches than the visible treasures of this world, yet Jesus and His sufferings now, with eternal glory bereafter, is the programme for the Christian.

31. Leave us not, I pray thee, forasmuch as thou knowest how we are to encamp in the wilderness and thou mayest be to us

It looks as if, for the moment, Moses was forgetting God and His cloud and His unerring guidance. So unstable is man even at his best. We think of Simon Peter one moment confessing that Jesus was the Christ, the Son of the living God, and the next acting as Satan's mouthpiece to tempt the Lord to pity himself and turn from the cross (Matt. xvi, 16, 23).

32. And it shall be, if thou go with us, yea, it shall be, that what goodness the Lord shall do unto us the same will we do

Moses now talks more correctly, for we are fully authorized to offer all the riches of God's grace and glory to all who will accept Him through Jesus own, "The glory which Thou gavest hast sent Me into the world, even so have I also sent them into the world" (John xvii, 22, 28). See also John xvi. 15; I Cor. iii, 21-23.

33. And they departed from the mount of the Lord three days' journey, and the ark of the covenant of the Lord went before them in the three days' journey to search out a resting place for them.

This was infinitely better than the could Moses forget or seem to that God had led them out and would surely lead them all the way? How beautiful and all sufficient the promise in Ex. xxiii, 20, "Behold, I send an angel before thee to keep thee in the way and bring thee into the place which I have prepared."

34. And the cloud of the Lord was upon them by day when they went out of the

The cloud was the visible symbol of the Lord's presence with them, and He by it was their guide, their light, their shield, their oracle, their avenger, their covering (Ex. xiii, 21; xiv, 19, 20. 24-28; Num. ix, 15-23; x, 34; xiv, 14); in fact, all they needed for all their jour-

35. And it came to pass when the ark set forward that Moses said, Rise up, Lord, and let Thine enemies be scattered and let them that hate Thee flee before Thee.

David, by the Spirit, afterward embodied this in at least two of the Psalms (lxviii, 1, 2; cxxxii, 8). In Josh. iii, 13, the ark is called "the ark of the Lord, the Lord of all the earth," and before it Jordan was dried up and the walls of Jericho fell down. When the people relied upon God, who dwelt between the cherubim, their enemies fled before them, but when they relied upon the ark (which was only the symbol of His presence), then their enemies obtained the victory (I Sam. iv. 3, 11).

36. And when it rested he said, Return, O Lord, unto the many thousands of Is-Thus, whether on the march or at was Jehovah in their midst. In proportion as they realized this and acted accordingly they prospered, but when they forgot Him they failed. It is so with us. He says, "Lo, I am with you always," and when we believe this and thus realize His presence (for the only way to realize anything in the spiritual life is to believe it) and count on Him we have joy and peace and victory, but when we forget His presence we fail.

RELIGIOUS THOUGHT.

Gems Gleaned From the Teachings of All Denominations.

A pure faith cannot abide in an evil conscience.-Rev. Frank Crane, People's Church, Chicago: Man's Natural Attitude.

Man's natural attitude is that of a perpetual seeker.-Rev. Dr. Harris, Universalist, Worcester, Mass.

Destiny of the Race. The destiny of the race depends upon what men love and what they know Rev. A. Roeder, Swedenborgian, Or ange, N. J.

The Spirit of Unity. Unity is not necessarily identity; but it is sympathy. There may be diversities of gifts, but there may be also the same spirit; the spirit of love and Christian tolerance.-Rev. J. E. Adams, Presbyterian, Brooklyn. Christ's Word the Chart.

Every forward movement must be through Christ. His word is our chart. His spirit is our guide. His person is our star. Our motto is, "Not a new gospel, but more gospel."-Rev. Henry Van Dyke, Presbyterian, Princeton, Religion does not consist in mere connection with the Christian church or in formal worship; it is connected with the soul of man and has respect to internal condition. - Rev. Dr. William A. Silvius, Presbyterian, Pitts-Great City a Wilderness.

St. John's wilderness of rock is a fit name for a great city. It is a wilderness, and there are no wilder beasts of passion roaming among forests than some of the human monsters which live in the city.-Rev. Dr. Frank De Witt Talmage, Presbyterian, Chicago. The Love That Triumphs. Every man who feels "I am my brother's keeper" carries the stainless and bloodless weapon of a love with as their mills grind selfishness in all its forms finer than dust.-Rev. Frederick E. Hopkins, Congregationalist, Chicawhich he shall triumph with the gods,

Evil Effect of Overindulgence. Avoid an overindulgent spending of money. It is not hard work, but self indulgence, that ruins men. Revelry and luxury are the enemies of success. Real happiness consists not in increasing riches, but in limiting one's wants.-Rev. Arthur Thomas Fowler, Baptist, Chicago.

The Mission of the Church.

The church that knows its business and has caught the spirit of its Master is not trying to build itself up in separateness from the world, but to put itself with its ideals, aims and principles out into the world, that the world may be changed.-Rev. Charles R. Brown, Congregationalist, Oakland, Cal.

Must Begin With the Pulpit.

The church needs higher Christian living that must begin with the pulpit and show itself in the life and preaching of the preacher as well as in the pew. The preacher who would become a reformer must first reform bimself. He must be sure that egotism, self glory and self gain do not get into his efforts.-Rev. Dr. William J. Holtzclaw, Baptist, Atlanta, Ga.

The American Paradise.

The homes of our American people Christ, but we are not authorized to are the American paradise. There are seek either help or guidance from those tendencies against the home life of our who are not His. It will help us to re- people. These tendencies should be member that Jesus said concerning His | counteracted. If we are to grow greater as a nation as the years go on, the Me I have given them," and "as Thou American homes must be the great centers of our patriotic and religious altar fires. The good home is the paradise.-Rev. Dr. Pickard, Baptist, Cleveland, O.

Something Better Farther On.

Hope-what is it? The strange something which has made history and saved the world, for we read in the epistle to the Romans, "We are saved eyes or the wisdom of Hobab. How by hope." What is hope? A rational expectation of good as yet unrealized. something better farther on, from the morning of life to the setting of the sun; something better farther on.-Rev. A. Z. Conrad, Congregationalist, Worcester, Mass.

Ourselves Rather Than Our Gifts.

The hope and faith of the Christian go forth clad in the robes of sympathy. There is no other dress for the gospel virtues. Without sympathy every grace is stark and unsightly. With it the plainest face is resplendent, the harshest voice is tender and sweet. The world is dving for self abandoning love. It needs ourselves rather than our gifts .- Rev. Joseph Wilson Cochran, Presbyterian, Philadelphia.

Christ and the Golden Rule.

Many of Christ's sayings were not new in form, but they were radiant with new meaning. He did not create a new man, but he revealed in man a new manhood, a new humanity. He did not claim originality for the Golden "Whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them, for this is the law and the prophets." But to these words he gave reality; he coined then anew in the mint of his life.-Rev. Percy Stickney Grant, Episcopalian, New York.

The Philosophy of God.

God's philosophy of life is very simple. He made the body out of dust. He breathed the soul in from himself. To know the dust is science. To know God is religion. To know the dust is life temporal. To know God is life rest, the great reality of Israel's life eternal. I confess I do not know how Christ is both human and divine; I do not know how the two natures blend in one: I do not know how the two wills are welded together; I cannot fathom the infinite; I cannot rise to its height. What better would my life be if I could? But I know Jesus Christ, for when his righteousness had settled upon my soul his sunlight awakened me to a new day, a new life.-Rev. Dr. Gardner F. Eldridge, Methodist, New

JOKES OF THE DEVIL.

Some Recent Tragedies Caused by the Demon of Drink.

You will remember the policeman of Brooklyn whose story was told in this and other newspapers, says the New York Journal. He got drunk and murdered his wife. He gave himself up, confessing his crime, and said when asked why he murdered his wife:

"It is one of the devil's jokes. She was the best woman that ever lived." The devil of alcohol, whose active partner is whisky, is never idle. His jokes go on daily, and their victims fill prison cells, paupers' graves and lunatic asylums every day. This unfortunate policeman, whose record was perfect, drank to excess and murdered his wife. That was one of the devil's jokes-it destroyed a good woman and made a family of young children motherless and father-

In New York city in a downtown district a huge black dog had been taught by customers of saloon keepers to drink beer and whisky. He bit a number of children, and the police were told to kill him. But the customers of the saloon keepers thought it very amusing to see a big black dog come in and howl for alcohol, and the dog was shielded from the police. Finally he bit two or three children, includ ing a little girl nine years old named Conanta Licitowa. This child died in convulsions.

Then the police started out in earnest to find the black dog drunkard and killed him. That was another of the devil's jokes worked out to the usual finish. The miserable brute, rendered murderous by alcohol, would have been kind and devoted; its last thought and its last inclination would have been to hurt a child but for the poison given to it by drunken men.

Another story was told recently in the newspapers. A man came home in the evening after drinking a good deal of whisky. He seized one of his chil dren by the feet, swung it around his head, dashed it against the floor and destroyed its life. By way of excuse he could only say that he was drunk. He could only prove by neighbors and by his own poor wife that he was a kind hearted man and a devoted father

Another of the devil's jokes.

FOR HEALTH'S SAKE.

One Reason Why John G. Woolley Believes In Temperance.

Drink is dangerous. Nearly all the men and women who have been ruined by it were confident they could control themselves. It is unwholesome. Granting it may be useful under certain circumstances, yet in practice it does harm, and that continually. The most experienced physicians will confess that even in their hands its food value treachery and that its drug value is always a matter of experiment and risk. Personally, says John G. Woolley in the New Voice, I do not think it proved always to be useless for nutrition or injurious for medicine, but if I am not mistaken the statistics of drunkenness will show that doctors of all educated men are its most numerous victims.

It may be said this proves too much, many things that everybody does are more or less unhealthy and that the case would be as good against meat eating, late suppers, coffee, running to trains, etc. But it is certainly not too much to stand up for the sacredness of life and its inseparable postulate, the inviolableness of sound, sane and abounding health. So far from fearing to admit these other things upon an equal footing into the contention I welcome them and all their kind and make my whole claim in the premises upon

That every Christian ought to remember his own body to keep it holy that once it be shown that flesh eating is a peril or an injury in any case there ought to be an end of it in that case. that late suppers ought to be cut out even upon suspicion, that old people ought never to run to eatch a train and that coffee ought to be put in the dock with alcohol if as strong a case be made out against it.

I only hold as relating to beverage and popular remedy alcohol that, with all the evidence in on both sides and giving it the benefit of every reasonable doubt, it ought to be outlawed in individual life and home and church and state in the sacred name of health.

A Bar Without Beer.

A "bar without beer" is to be opened under the auspices of the Browning settlement, Walworth, London. It will be on the lines of the "Red House" in east London. A building has been erected at the corner of York road and Walworth road, and the aim of the settlement will be to supply wholesome food, tea, coffee, cocoa, etc., at a price within the means of the working classes. In the same building a Robert Browning club for workmen will be established, and the Dr. Dale Memorial library will find a home under the same roof. Membership of the club will give free access to the library, billiards, bagatelle, pingpong, unlimited opportunities for mental culture, cricket. football, etc.

It was one of those perfect after noons that so often come in the early Canadian summer before nature grows weary with the heat. The white gravel road was trimmed on either side with turf of living green, close cropped by the sheep that wandered in flocks along its whole length. Beyond the picturesque snake fences stretched the fields of springing grain, of varying shades of green, with here and there a dark brown patch, marking a turnip field or summer fallow, and far back were the woods of maple and beech and elm, with here and there the tufted top of a mighty pine, the lonely representative of a vanished race, standing clear above the humbler trees.

As we drove through the big swamp, where the yawning, haunted gully plunges down to its gloomy depths. Graeme reminded me of that night when our horse saw something in thet same gully and refused to go past, and I felt again, though it was broad daylight, something of the grewsomeness that shivered down my back as I saw in the moonlight the gleam of a white thing not far through the pine trunks.

As we came nearer home the houses became familiar. Every house had its We had eaten or slept in most of them; we had sampled apples and cherries and plums from their orchards, openly as guests or secretly as marauders, under cover of night-the more delightful way, I fear. Ah, happy days, with these innocent crimes and fleeting remorses, how bravely we faced them, and how gayly we lived them, and how yearningly we look back at them now! The sun was just dipping into the treetops of the distant. woods behind as we came to the top of the last hill that overlooked the valley in which lay the village of Riverdale. Wooded hills stood about it on three sides, and where the hills faded out there lay the millpond sleeping and smiling in the sun. Through the village ran the white road, up past the old frame church and on to the white manse hiding among the trees. That was Graeme's home and mine, too, for I had never known another worthy of the name. We held up our team to look down over the valley, with its rampart of wooded hills, its shining pond and its nestling village. The beauty, the peace, the warm, loving

Only old Dunc Me-Leod was equal to the moment, for as Graeme called out, "Hello, Dunc!" the old man lifted up his hands and called back in an awed voice:

"Bless my soul! Is it yourself?" "Stands his whisky well, poor old chap!" was Graeme's comment. As we neared the church he pulled up his team, and we went quietly past the sleepers there, then again on the full run down the gentle slope, over the little brook and up to the gate. He had hardly got his team pulled up before, flinging me the lines, he was out over the wheel, for coming down the walk, with her hands lifted high, was a dainty little lady, with the face of an angel. In a moment Graeme had her in his arms. I heard the faint cry, "My boy, my boy!" and got down on the other side to attend to my off horse, surprised to find my hands trembling and my eyes full of tears. Back upon the steps stood an old gentleman, with white hair and flowing beard. handsome, straight and stately, Graeme's father, waiting his turn.

"Welcome home, my lad!" was his greeting as he kissed his son, and the tremor of his voice and the sight of the two men kissing each other, like women, sent me again to my horses' heads.

"There's Connor, mother!" shouted out Graeme, and the dainty little lady in her black silk and white lace, came out to me quickly, with outstretched hands.

"You, too, are welcome home," she said and kissed me.

I stood with my hat off, saying something about being glad to come, but wishing that I could get away before I should make quite a fool of myself, for as I looked down upon that beautiful face, pale, except for a faint flush upon each faded cheek, and read the

"Yes, certainly, I'll find him, Mrs. Graeme. I suppose he's as much of a scapegrace as ever." And off I went to look up Graeme's young brother, who had given every promise in the old days of developing into as stirring a rascal as one could desire, but who, as I found out later, had not lived these years in his mother's home for nothing.

"Oh, Jack's a good boy!" she answered, smiling again, as she turned toward the other two, now waiting for her upon the walk.

The week that followed was a happy one for us all, but for the mother it was full to the brim with joy. Her sweet face was full of content, and in her eyes rested a great peace. Our days were spent driving about among the hills or strolling through the maple woods or down into the tamarack swamp, where the pitcher plants and the swamp lilles and the marigoid waved above the deep moss. In the evenings we sat under the trees on the lawn till the stars came out and the night dews drove us in. Like two lovers. Graeme and his mother would wander off together, leaving Jack and me to each other. Jack was reading for divinity and was really a fine, manly fellow, with all his brother's turn for Rugby, and I took to him amazingly, but after the day was over we would gather about the supper table, and the talk would be of all things under heaven-art, football, theology. The mother would lead in all. 'How quick she was, how bright her fancy, how subtle her intellect, and through all a gentle grace, very winning and beautiful to see! Do what I would, Graeme would talk little of the mountains and his

"That seems to be the difficulty, Jack," said his mother, "to get hold of his tale."

"Oh, mother," groaned Jack, "you never did such a thing before! How could you? Is it this baleful western Influence?" "I shall reform, Jack," she replied brightly. "But, seriously, Graeme," 1 remonstrated, "you ought to tell your people of your life, that free, glorious life in the mountains."

"Free! Glorious! To some men perhaps!" said Graeme and then fell into

But I saw Graeme as a new man the night he talked theology with his father. The old minister was a spleudid Calvinist, of heroic type, and as he discoursed of God's sovereignty and election his face glowed and his voice

Graeme listened intently, now and then putting in a question, as one would a keen knife thrust into a foe, but the old man knew his ground and moved easily among his ideas, demoiishing the enemy as he appeared with jaunty grace. In the full flow of his triumphant argument Graeme turned to him with sudden seriousness.

"Look here, father. I was born a Calvinist, and I can't see how any one with a level head can hold anything eise than that the Almighty has some idea as to how he wants to run his universe, and he means to carry out his idea and is carrying it out. But what would you do in a case like this?" Then he told the story of poor Billy

"Would you preach election to that chap?"

Breen, his fight and his defeat.

The mother's eyes were shining with tears.

The old gentleman blew his nose like trumpet and then said gravely: "No, my boy. You don't feed babes with meat. But what came to him?" Then Graeme asked me to finish the tale. After I had finished the story of Billy's final triumph and of Craig's part in it they sat long silent till the minister, clearing his throat hard and blowing his nose more like a trumpet than ever, said, with great emphasis: "Thank God for such a man in such place! I wish there were more of us like him."

"I should like to see you out there, sir," said Graeme admiringly. "You'd get them, but you wouldn't have time for election."

"Yes, yes," said his father warmly; "I should love to have a chance just to preach election to those poor lads. Would I were twenty years younger!" "It is worth a man's life," said Graeme earnestly.

His younger brother turned his face eagerly toward the mother. For answer she slipped her hand into his and said softly, while her eyes shone like stars: "Some day, Jack, perhaps. God knows."

But Jack only looked steadily at her, smiling a little and patting her hand. "You'd shine there, mother," said Graeme, smiling upon her. "You'd better come with me."

She started and said faintly: "With you?" It was the first hint he had given of his purpose. "You are going back?"

"What-as a missionary?" said Jack. "Not to preach, Jack-I'm not orthodox enough," looking at his father and shaking his head-"but to build railroads and lend a hand to some poor chap if I can." "Could you not find work nearer home, my boy?" asked the father. "There is plenty of both kinds near us here surely."

"Lots of work, but not mine, I fear," answered Graeme, keeping his eyes away from his mother's face. "A man ly any longer the Christ myth." must do his own work.'

His voice was quiet and resolute. and, glancing at the beautiful face at the end of the table, I saw in the pale lips and yearning eyes that the mother was offering up her firstborn, that anclent sacrifice. But not all the agony of sacrifice could wring from her entreaty or complaint in the hearing of her sons. That was for other ears and for the silent hours of the night. And next morning, when she came down to meet us, her face was wan and weary, but it wore the peace of victory and a glory not of earth. Her greeting was full of dignity, sweet and gentle, but when she came to Graeme she lingered over him and kissed him twice, and that was all that any of us ever saw of that sore fight.

At the end of the week I took leave of them and last of all of the mother. She hesitated just a moment, then suddenly put her hands upon my shoulders and kissed me, saying softly: "You are his friend. You will some times come to me?" "Gladly, if I may," I hastened to answer, for the sweet, brave face was too much to bear, and till she left us for that world of which she was a part I kept my word, to my own great and lasting good.

When Graeme met me in the city at the end of the summer, he brought me her love and then burst forth:

"Connor, do you know, I have just discovered my mother. I have never known her till this summer." "More fool you," I answered, for often had I, who had never known a mother, envied him his.

"Yes; that is true," he answered shortly, "but you cannot see until you have eyes."

Before he set out again for the west I gave him a supper, asking the men who had been with us in the old varsity days. I was doubtful as to the wisdom of this and was persuaded only by Graeme's eager assent to my proposal.

"Certainly; let's have them," he said. "I shall be awfully glad to see them. Great stuff they were."

"But I don't know, Graeme. You see -well, hang it-you know-you're different, you know." He looked at me curiously.

"I hope I can still stand a good supper, and if the boys can't stand me why, I can't help it. I'll do anything but roar, and don't you begin to work off your menagerie act. Now, you hear me!

"Well, it is rather hard lines that when I have been talking up my lion for a year and then finally secure him he will not roar."

"Serves you right," he replied quite heartlessly. "But I'll tell you what I'll do-I'll feed! Don't you worry," be added soothingly. "The supper will

And go it did. The supper was of the best, the wines first class. I had asked Graeme about the wines.

"Do as you like, old man," was his answer. "It's your supper. But," he added, "are the men all straight?" I ran them over in my mind.

Yes, I think so." "If not, don't you help them down, and anywas you can't be too carefu'.

But don't mind me. I am quit of the whole business from this out." So I ventured wines, for the last time, as it happened. We were a quaint combination-old "Beetles," whose nickname was prophetic of his future fame as a bugman, as the fellows irreverently said: "Stumpy" Smith, a demon bowler; "Polly" Lindsay, slow as ever and as sure as when he held the halfback line with Graeme and used to make my heart stand still at his cool deliberation. But he was never known to fumble or funk. and somehow he always got us out safe enough. Then there were Rattray-"Rat" for short-who, from a swell had developed into a cynic with a sneer, awfully clever and a good enough fellow at heart; little "Wig" Martin, the sharpest quarter ever seen, and Barney Lundy, center scrimmage, whose terrific roar and rush had often struck terror to the enemy's heart and who was Graeme's slave. Such was the party. As the supper went on my fears began to vanish, for if Graeme did not roar he did the next best thing-ate and talked quite up to his old form. Now we played our matches over again, bitterly lamenting the "ifs" that had lost us the championships and wildly approving the tackles that had saved and the runs that had made the varsity crowd go mad with delight and had won for us, and as their names came up in talk we learned how life had gone with those who had been our comrades of ten years ago. Some success had lifted to high places, some failure had left upon the rocks, and a few lay in their graves.

But as the evening wore on I began to wish that I had left out the wines, for the men began to drop an occasional oath, though I had let them know during the summer that Graeme was not the man he had been. But Graeme smoked and talked and heeded not till Rattray swore by that name most sacred of all ever borne by man. Then Graeme opened upon him in a cool, slow way:

"What an awful fool a man is to damn things as you do, Rat! Things are not damned. It is men who are, and that is too bad to be talked much about. But when a man flings out of his foul mouth the name of Jesus Christ"-here he lowered his voice-"it's a shame; it's more—it's a crime." There was dead silence. Then Rat-tray replied: "I suppose you're right enough. It is bad form. But crime is rather strong.

I think.' "Not if you consider who it is," said Graeme, with emphasis.

"Oh, come now!" broke in Beetles. "Religion is all right. It is a good thing and, I believe, a necessary thing for the race. But no one takes serious-"What about your mother, Beetles?"

put in Wig Martin. Beetles consigned him to the pit and was silent, for his father was an Episcopal clergyman and his mother a saintly woman. "I fooled with that for some time, Beetles, but it won't do. You can't build a religion that will take the dev-11 out of a man on a myth. That won't do the trick. I don't want to argue about it, but I am quite convinced the myth theory is not reasonable, and, besides, it won't work."

"Will the other work?" asked Rattray, with a sneer.

"Sure." said Graeme. "I've seen it." "Where?" challenged Rattray. haven't seen much of it.' "Yes, you have, Rattray; you know you have," said Wig again. But Rattray ignored him. "I'll tell you, boys," said Graeme.

"I want you to know anyway why I believe what I do." Then he told them the story of old man Nelson, from the old coast days, before I knew him, to the end. He told the story well. The stern fight and the victory of the life and the self sacrifice and the pathos of the death appealed to these men, who loved fight and could understand sacrifice.

"That's why I believe in Jesus Christ, and that's why I think it a crime to fling his name about."

"I wish to heaven I could say that, said Beetles. "Keep wishing hard enough, and it will come to you," said Graeme. "Look here, old chap," said Rattray, You're quite right about this. I'm willing to own up. Wig is correct. I know a few at least of that stamp, but most of those who go in for that sort of thing are not much account."

"For ten years, Rattray," said Graeme in a downright matter of fact way. "you and I have tried this sort of thing," tapping a bottle, "and we got out of it all there is to be got, paid well for it, too, and, faugh, you know it's not good enough, and the more you go in for it the more you curse yourself. So I have quit this, and I am three days she was upon her feet and going in for the other."

"What? Going in for preaching?" "Not much-railroading, money in it -and lending a hand to fellows on the rocks."

"I say, don't you want a center forward?" said big Barney in his deep

"Every man must play his game in his place, old chap. I'd like to see you tackle it, though, right well," said Graeme earnestly. And so he did in the after years, and good tackling it was. But that is another story. "But, I say, Graeme," persisted Beetles, "about this business-do you mean to say you go the whole thing-Jonah, you know, and the rest of it?" Graeme hesitated, then said: "I haven't much of a creed, Beetles; don't really know how much I believe. per

"I'll go you that far," roared big Barney, following his old captain as of Two rooms for housekeeping, with stoves, etc.,

"Good man," said Graeme, striking hands with him.

"Put me down," said little Wig cheer-Then I took up the word, for there rose before me the scene in the league saloon, and I saw the beautiful face with the deep, shining eyes, and I was speaking for her again. I told them of Craig and his fight for these men's lives. I told them, too, of how I had been too indolent to begin. "But," I said, "I am going this far from tonight." And I swept the bottles into the champagne tub. "I say," said Polly Lindsay, coming up in his old style, slow, but sure, "let's all go in, say, for five years." And so we did. We didn't sign anything, but every man shook hands with And as I told Craig about this a year later, when he was on his way back from his old land trip to join Graeme in the mountains, he threw up his head in the old way and said: "It was well done. It must have been worth seeing. Old man Nelson's work is not done yet. Tell me again." And he made me go over the whole scene, with all the details put in.

But when I told Mrs. Mayor after two years had gone she only said, "Old things are passed away; all things are become new," but the light glowed in her eyes till I could not see their color. in Richmond, But all that, too, is another story.

> CHAPTER XV. COMING TO THEIR OWN.

MAN with a conscience is often provoking, sometimes impossible. Persuasion is lost upon him. He will not get angry, and he looks at one with such a faraway expression in his face that in striving to persuade him one feels earthly and even fiendish. At least this was my experience with Craig. He spent a week with me just before he sailed for the old land for the pur pose, as he said, of getting some of the coal dust and other grime out of him. He made me angry the last night of his stay and all the more that he remained quite sweetly unmoved. It was a strategic mistake of mine to tell him how Nelson came home to us and how Graeme stood up before the varsity chaps at my supper and made his confession and confused Rattray's easy stepping profanity and started his own nve year league, for all this stirred in Craig the hero, and he was ready for all sorts of heroic nonsense, as I called We talked of everything but the one thing, and about that we said not a word till, bending low to poke my fire and to hide my face, I plunged: "You will see her, of course?" He made no pretense of not understanding, but answered: "Of course." "There's really no sense in her staying over there," I suggested. "And yet she is a wise woman." he said, as if carefully considering the question. "Heaps of landlords never see their tenants, and they are none the worse.

"The landlords?"

"No, the tenants." "Probably, having such landlords." "And, as for the old lady, there must be some one in the connection to whom it would be a godsend to care for her.' "Now, Connor," he said quietly, "don't. We have gone over all there is to be said. Nothing new has come. Don't turn it all up again." [TO BE CONTINUED.]

A YOUNG LADY'S LIFE SAVED.

At Panama, Colombia, by Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Dirrahoea Remedy, Dr. Chas. H. Utter, a prominent physician, of Panama, Colombia, in a recent letter states: "Last March I had as a patient a young lady sixteen years of age, who had a very bad attack of thysentery. Everything I prescribed for her proved ineffectual and she was growing worse every hour. Her parents were sure she would die She had become so weak that she could not turn over in bed. What to do at this critical moment was a study for me, but I thought of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and as a last resort prescribed it. The most wonderful result was effected. Within eight hours she was feeling much better inside of at the end of one week was entirely well." For sale by S. E. Welch, JR.

Indigestion is often caused by over-eating. An eminent authority says the harm done thus exceeds that from the excessive use of alcohol. Eat all the good food you want but don't overthe good food you want but don't overload the stomach. A weak stomach may refuse to digest what you eat. Then you need a good digestant like Kodol, which digests your food without the stomach's aid. This rest and the wholesome tonics Kodol contains soon restore health. Dieting unnecessary. Kodol quickly relieves the feeling of fulness and bloating from which some people suffer after meals. which some people suffer after meals. Absolutely cures indigestion.
